A LESSON IN MYTHOLOGY. read to her, one summer day,
A little mythological story
About the maid who laughed at love
And ran a race for love and glory.

I closed the book. She raised her eyes And hushed the song she had been h Glancing across the shedy lawn, I saw my wealthy rival coming.

"These ancient tales," I gravely said, "With meaning wise are often lades And Atlanta well may stand As type of many a modern maiden.

New York "Times" How naking rain to order. He proposes to send up baloons loaded with dynamite, which his plan into operation is a trifling appro few thousand dollars. In entering upon the profession of rain-making, General Ruggles, unfortunately, declines to submit himself to the conditions which public Central Africa opinion imposes upon a native King who practices rain-making to his promises is put to death. We should all have more confidence in General Roggles were he to adopt the rules governing members of his profession in Central Africa.

It is the opinion of many scientific menthatrain can be produced by means analogous to those suggested by Gen. Ruggles, and it is therefore quite possible that his plan will really accomplish what he claims for it. If so, our country is threatened with a danger in comparison with which the election to the Presidency of a man who has already gained sufficient experience in that offices to know to discharge its duties intelligently is hardly worth mentioning. If free rain-making is recognized as the right of every citizen, we shall all be ready to cut one another's throats in a very short time. Af present the rain falls, when it does fall, alike upon the just man and the Greenbacker. But Gen. Ruggles proposes to put into the hands of every selfish or malignant man the opportunity to thwart and to ruin his neighbor with excessive rain. Under the thin pre-

State, or as a war power capable of being exercised in times of peace. If the former view should prevail, the rains of configurates would be a constant cause of quarrels. Rhode Island, for example, could not possibly keep her own rain inside her narrow boundaries. The neighboring counties of Massachusetts and Connectiout would have to be rained upon whenever water was wanted for the Providence mills, and the drippings from Rhode Island umbrellas would soon be included the provided that the provided the provided that the provided learn that Mr. David Sinton, with all his wealth, has been turning his mind to the invention of a device for consuming smoke. Such, however, is the fact. Wednesday he piloted a committee of ladies interested in the consumption of smoke in our city, to the furnace in his building. The device is a very simple one, consisting of three receding arches, occupying perhaps three feet of space under the boiler, giving the appearance of a tunnel as you look in the doors of the furnace. These arches arrest the smoke, so that when the flame has passed the third and lowest arch, it is incandescent. This device absolutely preyents all escape of smoke, even when incandescent. This device absolutely preyents all escape of smake, even when the furmace is fed, except when the fire is made in the morning. There is, a saying of 20 per cent of the fuel, and slack can also be used. The furnace requires replenishing but once in three hours, thus diminishing the work of the stoker very materially. The cost is moderate, and the device can be placed under any boiler without changing the walls of the furnace.

Bolled Leo or Murron.—It should soak in cold water two hours, and be bolled in a cloth. Serve with caper-sauce, mashed turnips, greens and carrots; or, for a small family, two dressings may be made thus; Cut off a little fillet, as veal, and stuff, or rosst with. The knuckles may be stewed with rice or barley for broth.

Hor Cross Buns.—Three cups of sweet milk, one cup of yeast; flour enough to make a stiff batter; set this as a sponge over night. In the morning add one cup of sugar, one-half cup melted butter, one-half numeg, sait-spoonful of sait, flour enough to roll out like biscuits; knead well and set to rise five hours. Roll half of sngar, one-half cap melted butter, one-half nutmeg, salt-spoonful of salt, flour enough to roll out like biscuits; knead well and set to rise five hours. Roll half an inch thick; cut into round cakes and put in pan. When they have stood half an hour make a cross on each one and put into the oven instantly.

Keep it afterward in a tub of beef brine. Swettereads Saute—Blanch two throat breads, cut them in slices, put some butter in a frying-pan, and melt it; then put them in it, season over with salt, pepper, the juice of a lemon, parsley and a bay leaf. Turn them until done, and serve very hot. The sauce should be made of eight tablespoonfuls of white sauce in a pan with four tablespoonfuls of milk. Boil five minutes; then stir in two ounces of butter. Stir quickly over the fire until the butter is melted, but do not let the sauce boil aftersthe butter is in. It should be made just at the time of serving.

To Roast Swettenkars.—Take the

To ROSET SWEETERLAS.—Take the sweetbreads (heart breads are the best) and lay them in water at blood heat to disporge for three or four hours, then blanch them for two minutes inaboling water. Put them in a stew pan with a few slices of carrot, onion, turnip, a little parsley, thyme, bay leaf, a little mace and pepper, and a small piece of bacon. Cover over with a little water, and boil for twenty minutes. Take them out and dry them in a cloth. Crumb them with egg and bread. The them on a spit, and roast for ten or fifteen minutes, until of a nice brown color; or they may be browned in an oven or fried in boiling lard for ten minutes, in which case they should stay a little longer. They may be served in plain gravy and a piece of toasted bread underneath. Heart breads are expensive, and not often used. They may be larded, cooked, and served like a fricandeau; or if a throat bread is large, it may be larded and dressed as above.
